IRISH PROVINCE OF AUGUSTINIAN FRIARS

The Augustinians arrived in Ireland around the year 1275. Within a few years they had established quite a few houses which were located in many different parts of the island. Things were to change with the advent of the Reformation which saw most of those houses being closed although some friars did remain in the country. Currently the Augustinians have ten communities in Ireland. If you would like to know more about the Augustinians see www.augustinians.ie or contact your local priory. In Limerick, contact: The Prior, Augustinian Community, O'Connell Street.

Prof Marian Lyons, Maynooth

Dr Colmán Ó Clabaigh, Glenstal

Dr Kieran O'Mahony, Dublin

Dr James Puglisi, Rome

The Reformation launched by the Augustinian friar, Martin Luther, when he publicly posted his 95 theses in October 1517, was a crucial turning point in history and its consequences still impact on us to this day. The first part of the Conference will explore the beginnings of this Reformation, how it impacted on Ireland and on the Augustinian friars. The second part will explore the theological dimensions of the Lutheran Reformation and the current state of agreements between Roman Catholics and Lutherans.

Eugene Duffy, Lecturer in Theology & Religious at Mary Immaculate College, Conference Co-Convenor

The Irish Province of Augustinians is delighted to be able to offer you this conference on the history and thought of the Augustinian friar, Martin Luther, in conjunction with Mary Immaculate College. As Augustinians we are committed to sharing our search for God in our community and with anyone who is also searching. We believe that it is by sharing that search together that we come to know God and ourselves in a fuller way. Luther's particular search led him down unexpected paths. At different times in history some of these paths were marked by conflict and division among Christians, but Luther's courageous search for God has ultimately enriched our own searching for each one of us. To search for God is to undertake a challenge that is both worthwhile and enriching. It is also something that we cannot not do, because, as Augustine says: "our hearts are restless until they rest in God."

Noel Hession, Prior, St. Augustines Church Limerick, Conference Co-Convenor

Carlos Eire is T. L. Riggs Professor of History and Religious Studies at Yale University, where he has served as chair of the Department of Religious Studies and the Renaissance Studies Program.
